Stop. Paws. Breathe it in.

Oakville's trails and gardens are ideal escapes for anyone who wants to live nature-adjacent without having to go off-grid. It's the perfect place to embrace nature's beauty right in your backyard. You'll never have to leave town to spend a day taking it all in with family or your furry friend.

SIXTEEN MILE CREEK

Hidden among the quiet neighbourhoods of north Oakville is one of the Greater Toronto Area's most gorgeous natural spaces. Hike the sloping trail down to Sixteen Mile Creek, and you'll find a river running through a forested valley full of winding trails and wooden bridges. Massive, flat stones at the water's edge provide the perfect place for quiet reflection, and lookout points along the path provide spectacular views. It's one of the best spots in southern Ontario to embrace the fall colours, and the best part is that it's largely a secret. Whether you're stopping by for a morning run or hiking with a loved one on the weekend, it's rare that you'll see more than one or two in-the-know nature lovers enjoying the silence.

LIONS VALLEY PARK TRAIL

Despite being nestled beneath a major bridge on Dundas St., which runs along the northern edge of Oakville, Lion's Valley Park is another natural gem with wide-open spaces. The park's valley walls completely block out the din of traffic. And with its nature-inspired playgrounds, wooden bridges, and a series of trails that snake along the edges of Sixteen Mile Creek, it's the perfect place to spend an afternoon lost in nature.

BRONTE CREEK PROVINCIAL PARK

How many cities in the GTA have a provincial park in their own backyard? Bronte Creek is brimming with activities, including campgrounds, a children's farm, a 1.8-acre outdoor pool, and five pristine hiking trails that weave throughout the park's 6.4 square kilometres. Bring your gravel bike for a day in the saddle, or wax up your cross country skis for the winter. The park also features a Maple Syrup Festival in early spring and Ghost Walks in late summer, so there's something for everyone who enjoys the outdoors. Most importantly, there's so much wild space that you'll forget you're still within the city limits.

GLEN ABBEY TRAIL

A hidden gem of northern Oakville, the lengthy Glen Abbey Trail is a runner's best friend, but it's also perfect for bike rides and cross-country skiing. It connects four of Oakville's pristine creeks (Taplow, Glen Oaks, McCraney, and Fourteen Mile), so there's always a new path to explore.
